DR. CHALFANT ESCAPES.

The Slayer of Dr. Bacon Walks out of Prison.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 3.—Dr. Chalfant, the dentist, who shot and killed Dr. Bacon, of Boston, agent of the Goodyear Rubber Company, on April 14, 1877, escaped yesterday from the San Quentin prison. Chalfant was condemned to ten years imprisonment and had already servad nearly three and a half years. His escape was effected by a lady visitor, who, it is supposed, succeeded in bringing him a suit of clothes, which he put on and quietly walked out, not being recognized by the guards. His friends were working hard for his pardon, with good prospects of success. The prison warden offers fifty dollars reward for his capture.

RECEPTION TO VILLARD.

St Paul Gives the Railroad King an Ovation.

ST. PAUL, Minn., September 3.—Upon their arrival at St. Paul this morning a grand reception was given to the Villard party. The Mayor, members of the council and distinguished citizens were on hand with abundance of carriages into which the party proceeded. Soldiers were drawn up in front of the depot, presenting an imposing appearance, and the military band filled the air with music as the procession moved up Third street from the depot. The ovation was of the most splendid character. Buildings were profusely decorated with flags and banners streaming. Beautiful archways were at every corner. The military, fire department, leading citizens and wagons representing every industry of the northwest were in the procession. It was received by President Villard and party at Rice's Park. After reviewing the procession the guests were driven all over the city. President Villard, with General Grant, occupied the foremost carriage. From St. Paul they left for Minneapolis at half past twelve, there to receive a second reception.

MONTANA GLEANINGS.

Another Infringment on Poor Lo Talked of—The Fair.

HELENA, Mont., Sept, 1.—Senator Vest, of Missouri, arrived via the Northern Pacific this evening. He and delegate McGinnis, of Montana, are a special Congressional Commission to examine and report as to the feasibility of opening to settlement parts of several Indian reservations. They will leave in a few days on their mission.

The Territorial fair that begins on Monday promises to be one of the great events of the age in the west. Several of the fastest horses of the northwest are here. The fair will close on Saturday next. The Villard party will arrive here on Friday morning and spend the day at the fair on Saturday morning. They will leave for Mullon Tunnel to witness the driving of the golden spike

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Reckless Train Butchery.

BERLIN, Sept. 3—As a train from Berlin was passing Stegitz to-day it ran into crowds of people who were intending to take the return train to Berlin, and were pressing forward to enter the carriages on the wrong side. A number of people were killed and wounded. It is estimated that the number will reach forty.

All Ports of Anam Blockaded.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A dispatch from Hong Kong notes that the French General Bouch has demanded of the War Department an additional reinforcement of five thousand men. The country is still suffering from floods. The French Admiral has issued a notice declaring all ports of Annam, including Saigon, in a state of blockade.

False Rumor.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A rumor that the steamer Amerique, which has on board the cargo and passengers of the disabled steamer St. Germain, had foundered, proves to be untrue.

Deaths from Cholera.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 3.—There were five deaths from cholera yesterday.

Metropolitan Matters.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—Thos. Davenport, a California pioneer, for the last fifteen years a bookkeeper in the Bank of California, died at his residence in Alameda yesterday, aged 72 years.

The steamer Arabic, from Hong Kong, arrived yesterday, having on board the Corean Embassy and suite, en route to Washington. They are the first of their race ever seen on this continent.

The Golden Gate Fair opens at the Oakland Trotting Park to-day and continues all the week. Some of the fastest horses in the State have been entered for the races.

Touched Off.

SAN BUENAVENTURA, Sept. 3.—W. A. Gordon, an old and respected citizen of Santa Paula, has suicided by placing himself on a keg of giant powder, and touching it off. He was blown to atoms, pieces of his body being scattered all around. His brother from the East arrived a few hours after the occurrence. Temporary insanity is assigned as the cause.

Rebate of the Tobacco Tax.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Internal Revenue Bureau claims for rebate of taxes on tobacco, snuff and cigars, growing out of the recent Internal Revenue Act, have nearly all been presented, and it is estimated will aggregate $3,500,000. The total annual reduction on the revenue on tobacco, snuff and cigars is now computed at $3,655,000.

Newspaper Boycotted.

BOSTON, Sept. 3.- Resolutions were passed yesterday by the Amalgamated Irish and Catholic societies at Fall River in joint Convention to boycott the Daily Herald because the latter refused to print the appeal for aid on behalf of the families of the men executed for implication in the Phœnix Park murders.

The Telegraphers' Brotherhood.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3 —The Telegraphers' Brotherhood has dissolved connection with the Knights of Labor.

Metropolitan Notes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—John S. Gray, Secretary of the Harbor Commission, was to-day, on motion of the District Attorney, remanded back to the County Jail. The work of empanelling a jury in his case still continues.

To-day has been unusually warm and oppressive. The thermometer at noon registered 80 degrees.

Explosion of Sewer Gas.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sep. 3.—An explosion of sewer gas took place this morning, severely injuring two workmen. A lantern which one of them carried ignited the sewer gas, and before he could get back to the entrance hole the flames had burst up before him. His companion caught sight of him, and leaning over managed to pull him up out of the flames, badly burning himself while doing so. The entrance to the sewer was badly shattered by the force of the explosion. The accident is a good indication of the foul state of the city sewers.

NOBODY CAN DENY.

Consumers can depend upon the NEW ENGLAND BAKING POWDER as being exactly as represented. It is Cream of Tartar and Bicarbonate of Soda of perfect purity, scientifically combined; NOTHING ELSE.

The price of the NEW ENGLAND BAKING POWDER justifies the use of the very best materials. Consumers pay a fair price for the best and get it.

It is self-evident that Baking Powders represented to be composed of the same materials as the NEW ENGLAND, and which are sold to dealers at less than the pure materials themselves are worth, cannot be pure.

The large demand for NEW ENGLAND BAKING POWDER, and consequent failing off in sales of adulterated and inferior powders, has developed a spitefulness on the part of some manufacturers and dealers, finding that the quality of the NEW ENGLAND cannot be successfully attacked, new brands and close imitations, represented to be as good, are put on the market. With these they endeavor to tempt dealers with low prices, and thus impose on consumers.

POINTS FOR INVESTORS TO CONSIDER.

It is not uncommon to hear people, who have not given the matter much attention, say that real estate is terribly inflated in Los Angeles county, that the country won't justify such prices as are asked and the bottom must drop out at an early day. They compare prices here with the prices asked for the cheap lands of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Minnesota, and say, "Why pay from fifty to one hundred per cent. more for lands in this section, which are more remote from the great markets of the American continent?" But these people, if they would but stop to consider, might soon discover that there are some very valid reasons why land here is so valuable at present and why it is likely to become even more so.

In the first place it is beyond dispute that many hundreds of invalids have been permanently benefited by the climate of Southern California. There are plenty of cases on record where persons so low with consumption that they could scarcely walk when they arrived here are now able to attend to their business as if they were in perfect health. They dare not return to their Eastern homes—they must live here—for in any other part of this country they would be almost immediately at the mercy of their insidious enemy. The destructive lung diseases so prevalent in the East are constantly increasing their ravages, and invalids seeking a mild and healthful climate are flocking to Southern California in search of homes. Many of these newcomers have an abundance of money and enterprise—they only lack health, and that they have at least a chance to regain here. Now land is not scarce in Southern California. We have land and climate enough to accomodate millions if they could live on land and climate. But unfortunately water is not in proportion to the superabundance of the first named necessities, and as a consequence the habitable area of Southern California is limited. To the thousands of people not blessed with the robust health necessary to battle with the extremes of heat and cold in the Eastern States,—with the bitter cold, snow, ice and slush of the Eastern Winter and Spring—or the debilitating and prostrating heat of the Eastern Summer, and who value health above all else, the value of land here does not seem inflated. In a land where Summer and Winter, the climate differs only in name, they are willing to pay four, five or even ten times the price for homes they would pay in any other portion of the country.

But leaving climate and health out of the question, the intrinsic value of land, judged by what it produces, ought to satisfy those who are most ready to find fault. Few of the raisin makers of the Santa Ana or San Gabriel valleys will clear less than $100 per acre from their raisin vineyards this year, and the culture of the apricot, prune, pear and English walnut and small fruits is even more profitable. Land which can be cultivated here produces almost everything grown in temperate or semi-tropical portions of the country, and with few exceptions the people of our farming communities are well satisfied with their condition. Every acre of land upon which water can be brought will be cultivated before many years have passed, and it is almost certain that a large portion of the future accessions to the population of this section will be of that class which has money and is not afraid to spend it.

There is no desire to inflate real estate values by writing as we have written. Any one who will carefully consider the matter will realize that the requisites demanded by a large proportion of the people now coming to Southern California, namely, land, climate and water, properly and evenly combined, are not likely to be a drug in the market even at present prices.

DID it occur to any of our readers that yesterday, September 3d, was the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the definite treaty of peace between this country and England? The day was not celebrated in either country, though it was as well worthy of it, as that day (July 4th) on which was made a declaration which resulted in a long and distressing war.

THE newest avocation in South Carolina is the destruction of illicit stills for a government reward of $50 each. It is freely charged that the moonshiners are in collusion with the raiders in putting up cheap distilleries in remote localities to be captured and credited.

SENATOR EDMUNDS has announced that it is his intention to introduce and press a bill in the coming Congress, for the establishment of a telegraph system under the control of the government. Such a measure should receive careful consideration, and coming from Senator Edmunds' hands, it will receive it. He says the government has long since seen the necessity of a telegraph service in connection with the Post-office Department, and thinks it probable that early congressional action will be taken in this direction. Governor Butler thinks the Government ought to control the telegraph, but is opposed to the purchase of any existing plants. Congressman Kasson, also, regards a Government telegraph as the fittest solution of the question. It is noticeable that opposition to the scheme proceeds chiefly from Democrats. They are afraid that the telegraph service would be made an instrument of political power by the ruling party. If the Democrats were in power it is quite likely that the sentiment on this question would be reversed. They would advocate a Government telegraph, while, possibly, the Republicans would oppose it.

THE Catholic Review attributes the popularity of the prize fighter and saloon keeper Sullivan, to the boasted culture of New England, which "is fast learning to ignore the supernatural and to despise the ideal of the angelic Christian virtues, and consequently, in spite of the elegancies of the esthetics, the fascinating realism of art and the external refinements of society, the brute instincts of human nature are fast coming to the surface and being stimulated to an unnatural degree." To this the Springfield Republican makes a just reply that Sullivan's popularity has no more to do with "New England culture" than it had to do with men before the flood. "It belongs to an element entirely foreign to New England, to the race that Sullivan belongs to, which furnishes the great majority of all the fighters and rum-sellers in New England, and which is almost wholly Roman Catholic in religion and alien in feeling to the old and true New England which abhors and despises the brutality glorified in Sullivan and his sort. Without the Irish, Sullivan could not exist in New England in the capacities and callings which are his choice."

THE old bell which hung in the Santa Barbara Mission Church over a hundred years, and by which, as a local journal says, "four generations of people have been called to matins," is now in San Francisco to be recast. Which prompts the Alta California to say: "It seems a pity to destroy such a relic, even if its material goes into the composition of a new bell. It would be a graceful act for some of our wealthy people to send back to the Santa Barbara Catholics their old bell intact, accompanied by a new one."

SAN BUENAVENTURA gets even with the Zenith City, to wit, Santa Barbara, in the following fiendish paragraph, which appears in the Ventura Free Press: "And now it is said that a Santa Barbara girl made those eighteen-inch tracks in the sandstone at Carson City while on a visit there last summer." We do not quite believe that it is true, still it may be. The Santa Barbara girls are much given to mountaineering.

SENATOR WARNER MILLER, of New York, is of the opinion that James G. Blaine should be the Republican candidate for President in 1884. Ex-Senator Saunders, of Nebraska, says Blaine is the first choice of his State, with Logan and Lincoln as even seconds.

THE railroad debt of the country is now $7,000,000,000, or over four times what our national debt is. The mileage is 114,000 miles. This makes an average indebtedness per mile of over $63,000.

SENATOR LOGAN, in his progress through the wild West, presents each Indian chief whom he meets with a lock of his hair. Poco tiempo, who will mourn for Logan's bare and shining poll?

THE weather is pretty hot in Los Angeles now. We wish it was like Ohio weather will be after the Republican cyclone strikes the Democratic party in October. That will be a cold day.

ONE of the favorable signs of the times is that gold is again flowing to this country from Europe. During the past week the amount reached $1,380,941. Total since January 1, $9,806,201.

THE national bank circulation has fallen off in the past year to the extent of $8,000,000.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The Democratic party has vertigo in its head and indigo in its countenance.

The Ohio Democratic platform is a big spread for so little oleomargarine.

When th Democratic party gets thoroughly sick of itself it will begin to turn the rascals inside out.

If the Republican party must go, the Rochester Post-Express is satisfied that it will be a case of go-as-you-please.

The Cleveland Leader premises to believe Dorsey as soon as Dana appoints him to a position of trust in the office of the Sun.

John G. Thompson, Democratic manager of Ohio, after the recent Hamilton county convention predicted the election of Foraker by 30,000 majority.

The Mobile Register says that if Mr. Randall is to be "slaughtered" because of his views on the tariff, "then farewell all hope of success for the Democratic party."

Governor Rusk, of Wisconsin, denies that he lately told Frank Howe that he favored the renomination of Arthur. He says he isn't for Arthur either for first or second choice.

The time has arrived for the Ohio Democrats to quit their nonsense, hang up their augers and begin plugging the holes in the bottom of their boat for a sail up Salt river.

"No man can be a good Democrat who believes in a tariff for protection," said the late Judge Black. This rules out a good many Pennsylvanians who call themselves Democrats.

Iowa and Ohio are the only October states this year. The November states are Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Mississippi and Virginia. We have stated this before, but people seem inclined to forget it.

Ex-Governor Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, will stump Iowa in behalf of the Democracy and whisky. Tom professes to be a religious man and a temperance man, but, it seems, his religion and his temperance are not more than skin deep.

Speaking of the Cincinnati Democratic convention, a looker-on says: "As the afternoon wore on the complexion of things grew decidedly groggy, and the gathering became a howling, swearing, sweating, fighting mob. The police had a score of hand-to-hand combats. The wounded were carried away as fast as they fell in battle."

"Privileges of the Press."

San Francisco Evening Post, Aug. 28th.]

A good deal of bitterness has been caused by the treatment of the press representatives during the Conclave, and as the Post has not heretofore taken any part in the discussion, a word or two from it on the subject may not be out of place.

The "privileges of the press" are not generally understood, certainly not by those who were responsible for the discourteous treatment of reporters at the Pavilion. When a properly accredited reporter presents himself anywhere he is engaged on his lawful business, and represents, in a general way, the entire body of citizens. He very rarely goes anywhere of choice, but always for duty. It is his right to expect and receive courteous treatment. Every facility should be placed in his way for discharging his important and responsible functions; and if failure in either respect is made, injury is done not merely to the individual, but also to the public whom he serves.

Fortunately the occasions are few and far between when any grievance of this nature arises, but when they do occur they are of a peculiarly exasperating character. With special reference to the Conclave, it is not too much to say that its success was wholly due to the kindly interest taken in it by the local press. But for its friendly advocacy beforehand, and its enterprise, lavish expenditure and free advertising during the twenty-second Triennial Conclave, the same would have been a tame affair, despite the "bravery" of the "Sir Knights," their prancing steeds and nodding plumes. For this enterprise the press representatives at least deserved civil treatment. Care should have been taken that they had ready access and egress at all times. They asked nothing beyond this and neccessary accommodation within the building. It is notorious that they did not receive either. Where the fault lies it is not for us to say; we simply point out that the fault existed.

With regard to the future, let us say this, that "the privileges of the press," taken in the widest sense, do not imply any special favor conferred upon its representatives. Quite the contrary. Free admission to a public demonstration of any kind is a very inadequate set-off to the services of a trained reporter, and the cost to the newspaper proprietor incident to producing his report. Very often transactions which receive prominence in the press would be dismissed with brief mention were it not for the pride the newspapers take in magnifying local events. The exigencies of business do not compel this, any more than they required the prominence given to the Conclave, which was made the leading feature of the week.

It would be well to bear these points in mind, therefore, when occasion arises for the attendance of reporters at any public affair. It would save trouble and be more satisfactory all around to reflect, upon such occasions, that the favor is conferred by, and not upon, the press.

[The above is well said, and we desire to give it local application.—ED. TIMES.]

The Expensiveness of Deadhead Traveling.

Gath in Philadelphia Times.]

The telegraph company takes our money as if it were sending our messages, which it is not. Although I am often a telegraphic deadhead. I pay, like all deadheads, more than my fair proportion of rates. The most expensive thing in this world is a free ticket; it stimulates you to go or do when without it you would stay or rest. I say this with perfect good feeling towards all who extend courtesies to me. Many a hundred dollars I have paid for travel because I could go somewhere for nothing. Travel is the most expensive of honest vices. A man cannot travel manfully even with free transportation at less than $10 a day. A man and wife with their purchases, require $25 a day.

Bourrongnon.

From the Arizona Citizen Aug. 31st.]

The Los Angeles TIMES a few days ago published a private telegram from Yuma about a man missing there by the name of Bourgongnon. All mystery is cleared up by the following telegram which Chief Buttner has in his possession: "Albuquerque, August 24.—To Mrs. Louisa Bourgongnon, Maricopa—I am well. All is right. Thank you. G. Bourgongnon." The woman was here a day or two, stopping at Porter's Hotel, and gave evidence of insanity. She is in California somewhere at present.

The error of the zealous editor of the Evangelist doubtless consisted in placing his own interpretation on the passage from the Book of Job already cited. It says that the ostrich "leaveth her eggs in the earth and warmeth them in the dust," but it does not say that they hatch by the heat of the sun. It is an old mistake for doctrinaires to place a certain construction on Bible texts, and when that construction is undermined, to cry out that the authority of the Scriptures has been attacked. Even if it shall be proved that the ostrich hatches its eggs in the usual way—as is probably will be—the authority of the Scriptures will be in no way impaired.

The Value of a Full Stomach.

From the London Lancet.]

Two conditions oppose the acquirement of sleep. These are by hyperæmia of the brain—stimulating it to undue activity, and playing the part of a whip and spur to a tired horse; and the opposite of hyperæmia—excessive cerebral anæmia. To relieve the former by rational methods, a flank movement is required. The blood forces must be enticed away from their persistent assaults upon the cranial fortress. This can best be accomplished by filling the stomach with solid food, thus furnishing temporary engagement for the pugilistic globules on other fields. The food should be of the coarsest and plainest variety, else the remedy might produce an aggravation. We all know that the lower animals, after filling their stomach with coarse and abundant food, lie down immediately to rest and sleep; and they succeed, even after the most severe and exhausting toil upon the race course, at the plough or in the field. To a reasonable extent man should imitate the unartificial habits of less gifted animals.

Dueling that Meant Business.

From the Kansas City Journal.]

THERE was no particular display of chivalry about those Illinois duelists such as characterized the Virginia editors in their little affair of "honah," but they were very practical. The Illinois youths met on the field at daybreak and without any ceremony except a given signal, both fired and both fell dead. They were not trained marksmen either, but they meant business, which the Southern chivalry seldom do.

There is a lake on the Saw-tooth Mountains, California, that probably has no equal in the United States. It is about 65 miles from Bonanza, and at an altitude of nearly 12,000 feet. The lake lies in a basin among the sharp crags of the snowy Saw tooth and in a sheet of perpetual ice. It was discovered by a party of prospectors and named the Ice lake. The sun seems to have no effect on it, except in places adjoining the shore. It is simply a great bowl in the hard mountain rock, brimful of solid ice, upon which the rays of the sun descend with no power to penetrate.

CHIEF JU.

The messenger, a scout, set forth in glowing terms the advantages of reservation life, the luxury, ease and freedom were all depicted in such terms as to win the hearts of the council. The debate lasted until sundown, and the result was that Sanchez was despatched to San Carlos to inform the Agent that Ju was willing to surrender, to commit no more depredations and report to San Carlos to become a quiet, peaceful citizen. What Ju said was law. The bucks agreed and Sanchez departed. By the next day all remains of the debauch were banished, the Indians returned to their usual stolidity and the squaws made preparations for departure to the line where they would meet the white father's envoy. The scouts set forward first, the ponies and burros were caught and loaded with blankets, stolen goods, food and children. By one o'clock the valley was deserted and the band were marching with singular rapidity through narrow mountain defiles northward to the line. When they left the Sierra Madres they divided into small bands, and making a circuit arrived at the appointed place at the appointed time. Though seemingly without leader, they were obeying strict orders, avoiding the Mexicans as much as possible, and their small bands redividing in case of pursuit. It is a difficult matter to follow the trail of an Apache. He has a store of devices for throwing the pursuers off the track, all of which would be more or less successful in hilly country where heavy foot-soldiers are little likely to gain an advantage on the swift footed, agile, untiring savage. They found Archie McIntosh and the sargeant sent forward, already arrived at San Bernardino, and after much parley, arrangements were completed when Capt.——arrived from St. ——to take the Indians that far, until further orders from Washington decided their movements. The Captain gave orders that the band should be ready to move forward on the following morning and retired to his tent and blankets to snatch what sleep he could, amid the roar and din without.

At midnight he was awakened by McIntosh who told him to come out immediately. On inquiring what was the matter he learned that some superstitious fear had taken possession of the Indians, who were anxious to march at once, for fear the Evil Spirit should pursue and overtake them. Knowing it was best to humor them he gave orders for the march. Leaving his tent he found the Indians assembled in a large circle, silent and immovable. McIntosh informed his commander they would chant a sort of farewell. The customary fire was missing. The Indians feared it would attract the attention of the spirits who would discover their flight. The night was cloudy and the patches of cloud drifted swiftly across the moon, sometimes obscuring, sometimes revealing with startling distinctness the concourse of awed savages. Presently they broke forth into a mournful chant, which rose and fell on the cool faint breeze, and died away in a long sob. A wild cadence succeeded entirely divested of the monotony of the war chant, a mournful, swelling song that rolled along the foot hills and reverberated among the bluffs of the neighboring range. It was taken up by the startled owls and eagles, who screamed and hooted from their perches down the valley. The chant continued indescribably mournful and pathetic as though the renegades were taking their last farewell of all they loved best. Each Indian threw into his voice all the strong feeling of his nature, and when the wild strains ascended to the heavens, supplemented by the wail of the women, nature seemed awed by the sad appeal, and the echoes took up the refrain tenderly instead of harshly, and lingered ovit while the crowd rapidly dispersed. In five minutes the scouts were gone, and in five minutes more the crowd fell into marching order.

The entrance to White River Pass from Sulphur Spring Valley is a deep woody dell not over a quarter of a mile wide at any part. The towering rocks and fantastically worn pinnacles of white stone that loom up on the right side of the canyon render the scene unquestionably grand, and give the observer the impression that he is gazing upon the decaying ruins of some ancient casa. White River rushes merrily along in a series of foamy cascades that sometimes swell to mighty whirlpools and eddies, threading its way to the great valley below where it is soon lost from sight. The road winds through dark groves of ever-green oaks, crossing the river a dozen times before reaching the military post, which is so entirely surrounded by high timbered mountains, the most notable and by far the grandest being the rugged blue back-bone of the Chiricahuas, lifting its fringed crown above all of the neighboring peaks. The entire country is densely wooded with fir, pine, juniper, cypress and some other varieties, while the grass is abundant. The old trail leading from San Bernardino enters the pass at the south. This extensive pass was once the home of the Chiricahua Apache, as evidenced by the numerous mounds, still extant, and other relics. There are few spots that possess such an even temperature, so rarified but invigorating an atmosphere as this little retreat. The beauty and variety of the flora of White River Pass is astonishing. The convolvulus and grape vine twine and intertwine themselves around the trunks of the oaks and pines, while the poison ivy in all its beauty, springs to the top of the sycamore trees and drops its dainty tendrils half way from its airy perch. The clinging ipemenia, all aflame with its hundred tiny trumpet flowers, the sumac and the rarest and finest ferns flourished on the river's brink. The aquilegia's gold and purple blossoms peep from the willows of the swampy spots, while the wild potato modestly hides itself from view beneath the blossom-laden hawthorn. The delphinium, primrose, beautiful wild peas, wild rose, and crocus cluster beneath the oaks. The white violet sometimes appears with its purple sisters, but rarely. The Star of Bethlehem's exquisite waxen-flowers, supported on slender stems peep above the luxuriant grass and render the air heavy with their perfume. The simple four o'clocks in other parts, here attain great perfection. The frail lengthy stems terminate in small white flowers, veined with violet, and emitting a delightful odor, while the yucca's superb crown of creamy flowers forms a fine contrast to the vivid green surroundings.

It was one cool evening in the beginning of October. The sun had sunk beneath our olive-tinted stretch of clouds, now changing a radiant golden, and deep amber hues, from pale rose, to flaming red, and then fading to a purple twilight, hanging over the majestic peaks, and deepening to black, in the deep rugged gorges. The zenith was filled with the usual host of brilliant stars, which shed their uncertain light on the quiet post of S.—— when Capt.——arrived from the border with the self-subjugated Apaches mounted on their small, scarred, bony, stiffed-legged ponies, and accompanied by swarms of dogs,—dogs of all sizes and breeds; dogs differing from each other in all respects but one, their utter worthlessness. The savages made themselves at home, lounging contentedly around the post, and prying curiously wherever they were permitted to go Chief Ju, Sanchez, Ju's wife and daughter, accompanied by McIntosh and Mickey Free, were presented to the officers of the garrison, not to smoke the pipe of peace, exactly, but to indulge in a mutual and prolonged investigation, after which the chief and his friends were invited to eat which they did. Ju was apparently about fourty-five years of age, above the adverage hight of the Apache, with broad shoulders, a deep chest and powerful, muscular limbs. His jaws were square and heavy mouth and teeth coarse, small twinkling deepset eyes, a flat nose and long, coarse hair, flowing over his shoulders in a series of braids. His ears were hung with shells and his neck was adorned with the same. This the author and principal actor in the scenes of murder, pillage and bloodshed, that were paralysing the powers of the Mexicans by their horrors, and who to-day is at large, pursuing in triumph his bloody career while the military are negotiating terms by which he and his band shall be preserved from annihilation at the hands of indignant citizens. Ju had succeeded the bloody Victorio a short time before his surrender. Victorio had been killed by the Mexicans after many desperate attempts on the part of both countries to gain possession of him. Beside Ju, stood Sanchez, a small thin, wiry, Indian attired in the popular style of feathers, beads, moccasins, and a red tail, which floated gracefully in the breeze. McIntosh was half Scotch and he betrayed his blood in his complexion and hair. Mickey Free who was a namesake of Charles O'Malley's body-guard, plainly displayed his Irish origin in his retrousse nose and carroty hair. Both scouts were dressed in the usual style. They served as interpreters throughout the territory, but acted and dressed as Indians, living with them and joining in all their festivities and solemnities such as feasts, fradangoes, war-dances, etc. The chiefs wife and daughter were attired in white cotton jackets embroidered with red, the arms and neck being, bare and a loose floating calico skirt. Their arms were adorned with brilliant red peas or beans about an inch in length, a product of the Robina Hespida, a species of acacia found chiefly in high altitudes. A hole is drilled through the centre of the bean which is strung in several strands, presenting a gaudy but not unpleasing appearance, setting off the dark skins and white jackets to great advantage. The chief's daughter wore on her head a singular ornament composed of small white beads and abalone shells. It was interwoven into and twisted around her hair forming a mass as large as her head and so heavy as to draw the latter from its perpendicular, and this ungainly head-dress possessed the unsightly addition of a coating of dirt and odoriferous butter. The girl was an excellent horsewoman vaulting to the sharp ridge of the pony's back, galloping around the post through the woods followed by a yelling pack of hybrid curs. When the repast was finished, Ju said he wished to address the officers of the garrison through his interpreter. Being invited to proceed he said he had been a bad man a wicked, cruel chief, had committed many atrocities, murdered inoffensive men, had tortured many persons and adorned his belt with their scalps as trophies of his triumph, in short he had been a very wicked Indian, but now he wished to be a good Indian. He was getting old, but he was chief of the Apaches and could therefore exercise considerable influence although such was not the case with all chiefs, and as he had instilled bad ideas into the heads of his young men, he would endeavor to counteract the evil effects by different teachings. He would make good citizens of his braves, peaceful, industrious and loyal to the White Father. He willingly submitted himself and his people to the ruling of the Great Father because he was kind and forgiving, and the Apaches had perfect confidence in the promises he had made. When he finished he left, followed by Sanchez and the others, grave and solemn as only an Indian knows how to be. Shortly after his departure three squaws made their appearance in the mess-room bearing a bulky burden which proved to be a dish prepared from the mescal and in high favor among the Indians. It was an offering from Chief Ju evidently. The root is wrapped in bark or leaves, and placed on and under hot rocks, over which earth is thrown. It is then left one night or until the rocks cool, when it is removed and relieved of its wrappings. It has a rich juicy, appetizing appearance, the taste of which is similar to baked squash. Ju's band remained at S—— three weeks. The commissary was nearly emptied of its stores and the Indians were delighted with the prospect of good feeding and plenty of liberty on the broad expanse of San Carlos. The night before their departure they gave a fandango, expressive of their jubilant feelings and it was with a sense of intense relief that the garrison's commander saw the last redskin's red tail disappear in the dusty green oak thicket. After two years in the summer of 1881, signs of an eruption at San Carlos were detected. The Indians complained of a lack of food and of being defrauded in their rights to some silver mines located on the Reservation. The commissariat swore that he forwarded sufficient stores to the Indians and the Indians swore that they did not get them; that they were pinched for food. One Indian at a time commenced disappearing from the Reservation. Armed Apaches were seen on the Gila then in Sulphur Spring Valley and at last in September the alarm was raised of a general out-break and that Ju was on his way to Mexico. Each post turned out its complement of soldiers and scouts to no avail. Ju escaped to Chihuahua and Loco and Nana's bands, after putting the military to shame on the Gila, followed him and for two months the renegades depredated incessantly beyond the border. In the spring the United forces of the American and Mexican troops accomplished something. Small scouting parties were some times successful in a skirmish. The most important conflict was between the Indians and Capt. Tupper of the Sixth Cavalry near the border. Shortly after the engagement, Colonel Forsyth of New Mexico put in an appearance on the field, and claimed the honor of the victory. All officers commanding pursuing parties came in for their share of obloquy. The Indians settled into their winter quarters, the military into theirs, and peace reigned along the line until spring. In May and April 1882, some puny efforts were made against Ju. General Wilcox remained inactive, the Arizonians suffered and chafed, and General Crooks arrival was hailed with genuine delight. The Indians knowing him of old slunk back to their stronghold until this Spring, when they again broke out confining themselves to Mexican soil, having it, is said, a wholesome fear of the Grey Fox on American tierra.

MANY MEN —OF— MANY MINDS

The traditional shopkeeper prefers to keep his entire stock for years than to part from it without his customary profit. He would rather retain remnants and refused merchandise than to regulate the price to its real saleable value.

Such merchants are neither progressive nor judicious, and people trading at such an institution soon find out to their dismay that merchandise, like iron, wheat or produce, sometimes declines in value.

The PEOPLES' STORE, by reason of its large trade, finds that periodically it is necessary to weed out the large creation of

ODDS AND ENDS

That naturally accumulates. These goods are at present writing being marked and placed on our Center Tables.

We have just reviewed the Odds and Ends and find remarkable good values amongst them, such as would interest mothers and heads of families.

HEALTH restor ation to suffering humanity, by the most wonderful curative agents ever discovered. I invite the sick, no matter what their disease may be, to call and investigate for themselves before abandoning all hope, for it will cost you nothing. I give no encouragement unless there is a fair prospect of making a cure. I will endeavor to be candid in my opinion, and reasonable in my charges. I claim not to cure everybody, but to cure all that can be cured. I am formerly from New York city, and a graduate of one of the best medical colleges in the United States, and a most thorough Electrician, and have had many years successful practice in the treatment of both acute and chronic diseases. To remove all doubts and confidence in my patients that I claim nothing but what I am, I refer to my diplomas and the numerous recommendations in my possession, which will always be ready for inspection at my office. I HAVE NO ONE CURE-ALL nor do I make a hobby of any one mode of treatment. I use electricity or medicine or both, as cases may require. I find no cause of disease, remove it, and nature, assisted by medicinal remedies properly applied, will promote a cure without fail. TO THE LADIES. To the ladies I would say: You, whose sufferings have become intolerable, and who have suffered a thousand deaths from those diseases so common to your sex, give me a call, for I CAN CURE YOU WITHOUT FAIL, and make your lives once again worth living for. And all consultations will be strictly private and confidential. YOUNG MEN To those young men who are suffering from year to year, and whose vital powers have become impaired, and nervous system all wrong and broken down, and are suffering all the horrors from the effects of youthful follies; COME AND SEE ME. CHIEF JU.

The messenger, a scout, set forth in glowing terms the advantages of reservation life, the luxury, ease and freedom were all depicted in such terms as to win the hearts of the council. The debate lasted until sundown, and the result was that Sanchez was despatched to San Carlos to inform the Agent that Ju was willing to surrender, to commit no more depredations and report to San Carlos to become a quiet, peaceful citizen. What Ju said was law. The bucks agreed and Sanchez departed. By the next day all remains of the debauch were banished, the Indians returned to their usual stolidity and the squaws made preparations for departure to the line where they would meet the white father's envoy. The scouts set forward first, the ponies and burros were caught and loaded with blankets, stolen goods, food and children. By one o'clock the valley was deserted and the band were marching with singular rapidity through narrow mountain defiles northward to the line. When they left the Sierra Madres they divided into small bands, and making a circuit arrived at the appointed place at the appointed time. Though seemingly without leader, they were obeying strict orders, avoiding the Mexicans as much as possible, and their small bands redividing in case of pursuit. It is a difficult matter to follow the trail of an Apache. He has a store of devices for throwing the pursuers off the track, all of which would be more or less successful in hilly country where heavy foot-soldiers are little likely to gain an advantage on the swift footed, agile, untiring savage. They found Archie McIntosh and the sargeant sent forward, already arrived at San Bernardino, and after much parley, arrangements were completed when Capt.——arrived from St. ——to take the Indians that far, until further orders from Washington decided their movements. The Captain gave orders that the band should be ready to move forward on the following morning and retired to his tent and blankets to snatch what sleep he could, amid the roar and din without.

At midnight he was awakened by McIntosh who told him to come out immediately. On inquiring what was the matter he learned that some superstitious fear had taken possession of the Indians, who were anxious to march at once, for fear the Evil Spirit should pursue and overtake them. Knowing it was best to humor them he gave orders for the march. Leaving his tent he found the Indians assembled in a large circle, silent and immovable. McIntosh informed his commander they would chant a sort of farewell. The customary fire was missing. The Indians feared it would attract the attention of the spirits who would discover their flight. The night was cloudy and the patches of cloud drifted swiftly across the moon, sometimes obscuring, sometimes revealing with startling distinctness the concourse of awed savages. Presently they broke forth into a mournful chant, which rose and fell on the cool faint breeze, and died away in a long sob. A wild cadence succeeded entirely divested of the monotony of the war chant, a mournful, swelling song that rolled along the foot hills and reverberated among the bluffs of the neighboring range. It was taken up by the startled owls and eagles, who screamed and hooted from their perches down the valley. The chant continued indescribably mournful and pathetic as though the renegades were taking their last farewell of all they loved best. Each Indian threw into his voice all the strong feeling of his nature, and when the wild strains ascended to the heavens, supplemented by the wail of the women, nature seemed awed by the sad appeal, and the echoes took up the refrain tenderly instead of harshly, and lingered ovit while the crowd rapidly dispersed. In five minutes the scouts were gone, and in five minutes more the crowd fell into marching order.

The entrance to White River Pass from Sulphur Spring Valley is a deep woody dell not over a quarter of a mile wide at any part. The towering rocks and fantastically worn pinnacles of white stone that loom up on the right side of the canyon render the scene unquestionably grand, and give the observer the impression that he is gazing upon the decaying ruins of some ancient cities. White River rushes merrily along in a series of foamy cascades that sometimes swell to mighty whirlpools and eddies, threading its way to the great valley below where it is soon lost from sight. The road winds through dark groves of ever-green oaks, crossing the river a dozen times before reaching the military post, which is so entirely surrounded by high timbered mountains, the most notable and by far the grandest being the rugged blue back-bone of the Chiricahuas, lifting its fringed crown above all of the neighboring peaks. The entire country is densely wooded with fir, pine, juniper, cypress and some other varieties, while the grass is abundant. The old trail leading from San Bernardino enters the pass at the south. This extensive pass was once the home of the Chiricahua Apache, as evidenced by the numerous mounds, still extant, and other relics. There are few spots that possess such an even temperature, so rarified but invigorating an atmosphere as this little retreat. The beauty and variety of the flora of White River Pass is astonishing. The convolvulus and grape vine twine and intertwine themselves around the trunks of the oaks and pines, while the poison ivy in all its beauty, springs to the top of the sycamore trees and drops its dainty tendrils half way from its airy perch. The clinging ipemenia, all aflame with its hundred tiny trumpet flowers, the sumac and the rarest and finest ferns flourished on the river's brink. The aquilegia's gold and purple blossoms peep from the willows of the swampy spots, while the wild potato modestly hides itself from view beneath the blossom-laden hawthorn. The delphinium, primrose, beautiful wild peas, wild rose, and crocus cluster beneath the oaks. The white violet sometimes appears with its purple sisters, but rarely. The Star of Bethlehem's exquisite waxen-flowers, supported on slender stems peep above the luxuriant grass and render the air heavy with their perfume. The simple four o'clocks in other parts, here attain great perfection. The frail lengthy stems terminate in small white flowers, veined with violet, and emitting a delightful odor, while the yucca's superb crown of creamy flowers forms a fine contrast to the vivid green surroundings.

It was one cool evening in the beginning of October. The sun had sunk beneath our olive-tinted stretch of clouds, now changing a radiant golden, and deep amber hues, from pale rose, to flaming red, and then fading to a purple twilight, hanging over the majestic peaks, and deepening to black, in the deep rugged gorges. The zenith was filled with the usual host of brilliant stars, which shed their uncertain light on the quiet post of S.—— when Capt.——arrived from the border with the self-subjugated Apaches mounted on their small, scarred, bony, stiffed-legged ponies, and accompanied by swarms of dogs,—dogs of all sizes and breeds; dogs differing from each other in all respects but one, their utter worthlessness. The savages made themselves at home, lounging contentedly around the post, and prying curiously wherever they were permitted to go Chief Ju, Sanchez, Ju's wife and daughter, accompanied by McIntosh and Mickey Free, were presented to the officers of the garrison, not to smoke the pipe of peace, exactly, but to indulge in a mutual and prolonged investigation, after which the chief and his friends were invited to eat which they did. Ju was apparently about fourty-five years of age, above the adverage hight of the Apache, with broad shoulders, a deep chest and powerful, muscular limbs. His jaws were square and heavy mouth and teeth coarse, small twinkling deepset eyes, a flat nose and long, coarse hair, flowing over his shoulders in a series of braids. His ears were hung with shells and his neck was adorned with the same. This the author and principal actor in the scenes of murder, pillage and bloodshed, that were paralysing the powers of the Mexicans by their horrors, and who to-day is at large, pursuing in triumph his bloody career while the military are negotiating terms by which he and his band shall be preserved from annihilation at the hands of indignant citizens. Ju had succeeded the bloody Victorio a short time before his surrender. Victorio had been killed by the Mexicans after many desperate attempts on the part of both countries to gain possession of him. Beside Ju, stood Sanchez, a small thin, wiry, Indian attired in the popular style of feathers, beads, moccasins, and a red tail, which floated gracefully in the breeze. McIntosh was half Scotch and he betrayed his blood in his complexion and hair. Mickey Free who was a namesake of Charles O'Malley's body-guard, plainly displayed his Irish origin in his retrousse nose and carroty hair. Both scouts were dressed in the usual style. They served as interpreters throughout the territory, but acted and dressed as Indians, living with them and joining in all their festivities and solemnities such as feasts, fradangoes, war-dances, etc. The chiefs wife and daughter were attired in white cotton jackets embroidered with red, the arms and neck being, bare and a loose floating calico skirt. Their arms were adorned with brilliant red peas or beans about an inch in length, a product of the Robina Hespida, a species of acacia found chiefly in high altitudes. A hole is drilled through the centre of the bean which is strung in several strands, presenting a gaudy but not unpleasing appearance, setting off the dark skins and white jackets to great advantage. The chief's daughter wore on her head a singular ornament composed of small white beads and abalone shells. It was interwoven into and twisted around her hair forming a mass as large as her head and so heavy as to draw the latter from its perpendicular, and this ungainly head-dress possessed the unsightly addition of a coating of dirt and odoriferous butter. The girl was an excellent horsewoman vaulting to the sharp ridge of the pony's back, galloping around the post through the woods followed by a yelling pack of hybrid curs. When the repast was finished, Ju said he wished to address the officers of the garrison through his interpreter. Being invited to proceed he said he had been a bad ma a wicked, cruel chief, had mitted many atrocities, murdered inoffensive men, had tortured many persons and adorned his belt with their scalps as trophies of his triumph, in short he had been a very wicked Indian, but now he wished to be a good Indian. He was getting old, but he was chief of the Apaches and could therefore exercise considerable influence although such was not the case with all chiefs, and as he had instilled bad ideas into the heads of his young men, he would endeavor to counteract the evil effects by different teachings. He would make good citizens of his braves, peaceful, industrious and loyal to the White Father. He willingly submitted himself and his people to the ruling of the Great Father because he was kind and forgiving, and the Apaches had perfect confidence in the promises he had made. When he finished he left, followed by Sanchez and the others. grave and solemn as only an Indian knows how to be. Shortly after his departure three squaws made their appearance in the mess-room bearing a bulky burden which proved to be a dish prepared from the mescal and in high favor among the Indians. It was an offering from Chief Ju evidently. The root is wrapped in bark or leaves, and placed on and under hot rocks, over which earth is thrown. It is then left one night or until the rocks cool, when it is removed and relieved of its wrappings. It has a rich juicy, appetizing appearance, the taste of which is similar to baked squash. Ju's band remained at S—— three weeks. The commissary was nearly emptied of its stores and the Indians were delighted with the prospect of good feeding and plenty of liberty on the broad expause of San Carlos. The night before their departure they gave a fandango, expressive of their jubilant feelings and it was with a sense of intense relief that the garrison's commander saw the last redskin's red tail disappear in the dusty green oak thicket. After two years in the summer of 1881, signs of an eruption at San Carlos were detected. The Indians complained of a lack of food and of being defrauded in their rights to some silver mines located on the Reservation. The commissariat swore that he forwarded sufficient stores to the Indians and the Indians swore that they did not get them; that they were pinched for food. One Indian at a time commenced disappearing from the Reservation. Armed Apaches were seen on the Gila then in Sulphur Spring Valley and at last in September the alarm was raised of a general out-break and that Ju was on his way to Mexico. Each post turned out its complement of soldiers and scouts to no avail. Ju escaped to Chihuahua and Loco and Nana's bands, after putting the military to shame on the Gila, followed him and for two months the renegades depredated incessantly beyond the border. In the spring the United forces of the American and Mexican troops accomplished something. Small scouting parties were some times successful in a skirmish. The most important conflict was between the Indians and Capt. Tupper of the Sixth Cavalry near the border. Shortly after the engagement, Colonel Forsyth of New Mexico put in an appearance on the field, and claimed the honor of the victory. All officers commanding pursuing parties came in for their share of obloquy. The Indians settled into their winter quarters, the military into theirs, and peace reigned along the line until spring. In May and April 1882, some puny efforts were made against Ju. General Wilcox remained inactive, the Arizonians suffered and chafed, and General Crooks arrival was hailed with genuine delight. The Indians knowing him of old slunk back to their stronghold until this Spring, when they again broke out confining themselves to Mexican soil, having it, is said, a wholesome fear of the Grey Fox on American tierra.

MISCELLANEOUS

MANY MEN —OF— MANY MINDS

The traditional shopkeeper prefers to keep his entire stock for years than to part from it without his customary profit. He would rather retain remnants and refused merchandise than to regulate the price to its real saleable value.

Such merchants are neither progressive nor judicious, and people trading at such an institution soon find out to their dismay that merchandise, like iron, wheat or produce, sometimes declines in value.

The PEOPLES' STORE, by reason of its large trade, finds that periodically it is necessary to weed out the large creation of

ODDS AND ENDS

That naturally accumulates. These goods are at present writing being marked and placed on our Center Tables.

We have just reviewed the Odds and Ends and find remarkable good values amongst them, such as would interest mothers and heads of families.

Rain in Summer.

[After Longfellow.]

How beautiful will be the rain!
After the dust and heat,
In the broad and fiery street,
In the narrow lane,
How beautiful will be the rain!

How it will clatter along the roofs,
Like the tramp of hoofs!
How it will gush and struggle out
From the throat of the overflowing spout!
Across the window pane
It pours and pours;
And swift and wide,
With a muddy tide,
Like a river down the gutter roars
The rain, the long expected rain!

In the country, on every side,
Where far and wide,
Like a leopard's tawny and spotted hide,
Stretches the plain,
The dry grass and the drier grain
Are patiently expecting rain!

Virtue.

Sweet day, so calm, so cool, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and skye;
The dew shall weep thy fall to-night,
For thou must die.

Sweet rose whose hue angrye and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses,
A box where sweets compacted lie,
My music shows ye have your closes,
And all must die.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like a season'd timber, never gives;
But though the whole world turn to coal,
Then chiefly lives.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Street Railroad Talk.

To the Editor of the Times—SIR: The street railroads are calling to themselves considerable attention just now by their little differences among themselves, and I think the whole matter ought to be settled by the servants of the people (otherwise known as the City Council), in a very simple and reasonable way, to-wit: by requiring both companies to use the same track where they run upon the same portion of a street, and let the track be of the style of that laid down by the new company.

There is not room for more than one car track along the narrow streets, and it would not inconvenience the car lines half as much to so arrange their time-tables as not to conflict with each other, as two separate tracks will inconvenience the thousands of others who use the streets.

It is bad enough now with only one line of cars in operation, but what a terror Main street will be (from First to Commercial, especially) when both get to running.

There is either sense nor necessity in granting to separate rights of way along that or any other street, and the City Father do not fulfil their obligations to the electors (supposed to be the people when they allow such a thing. If tere should be half a dozen lines of cars leading from the various suburbs,—ad there will be in a short time—when they come to the main streets come them to use one common track, and it each line pay its just proportion of te first cost of the same, and the daily cot of keeping it in proper order, that t may obstruct the streets as little as possible.

If the companies cannot adjust this matter amicably, let the Street Committee, or te courts, do it for them. It is none o our business.

The railroad companies and their patrons cannot fairly ask more from the public than one line of rails on each street of the central portion of the city; with the necessary side tracks and turntables where the streets are widest and freest from travel.

Those cars have the double advantage of being more strongly built than the ordinary vehicle, especially as regards wheels, and if not being able to reciprocaly "turn out" when met. As an object the other travelers on wheels should certainly not be compelled to grant them more than one line along our streets.

As Mr. Hellman is impelled by philanthropical motives alone in his railroad enterprise, I am sure he will agree with me that it would "benefit and improve the city" more were the one track plan adopted, and as the other road seems to have forfeited all its rights, (if it ever had any,) I think it could and should be adopted. The old track is worn out and of a pattern that should not be allowed a day longer on our streets, so it should be torn up and Mr. H's track moved to the center of the street at once. It would not cost much, even if done on Sunday, and I think I can safely say that "we the public" demand it. If there is any space to spare along the streets, for heaven's sake let it be devoted to a narrow, boarded up passage way for the use of the fiendish bicyclist, whose delight and chief aim in life seems to be to frighten peoples' horses. It might be a good plan to allow each citizen one shot at each fiend as he goes flying down the streets pursuing his vocation, and pursued by imprecations. This running the gauntlet would divide the excitement, and equalize things more satisfactorily.

I was going to ask you why the Supervisors do not locate the new court-house up on Temple Street hill, or whatever is its name, somewhere near where the old pavilion used to be, in a place where it could be seen, and where there is a commanding view of the whole city and surroundings; and where there is plenty of air, and no noise; and where it would be only two blocks from the centre of town, and handy for the lawyers; and where property is cheap, [and where there is no job]; but if I asked such a question the Supervisors would laugh my stupidity to scorn, and I am very susceptible to ridicule, so I won't. Oh! how wonderful are the works of a wheelbarrow when examined through a microscope! and yet, not more wonderful than the works of our public servants. Solomon in all his wisdom could not hold a candle to the least of these. What a chronic growler is RUSTICUS.

What is the use of the Game Law, Anyway?

To the Editor of the Times.—SIR: We find the following brilliant essay in the Herald of yesterday;

"Quail cannot be killed until the first of October. Thirty days more during which people will violate this needless law and thousands of quail be killed for food. What is the use of this law, anyway?"

Why should the Herald man take it for granted that "people" will violate a law that stands as honored and respected on our statute books as any other enactment? Why should he characterize it as "needless?" Simply because it is violated! What a wonderful argument! If every man who handles a gun was too much of a gentleman to violate a plain law of nature—one that appeals to his own human instincts—then it would be needless. Or has he arrived at the conclusion that he alone is the all-wise judge in such matters, and that the legislators of California, as well as every other State in the Union, are a pack of ignoramuses for thinking it necessary to pass laws to protect the game of the country from indiscriminate slaughter by men who neither respect the rights of their fellow men nor are willing to allow the game a season for procreation, free from continuous pursuit, fright and destruction. And then he closes his wonderful effort by asking, with childish simplicity, "What is the use of the law, anyway?"

Great Scott! What is the use of a law for the protection of the parks of our city? What is the use of a law for the preservation of the beauties and grandeur of Yosemite and the Yellowstone? What is the use of a law to prevent the vandal from entering and destroying the beautiful homes we build? What is the use of a law preventing the destruction of the food fish of our rivers and lakes? The use of the game law is to prevent poachers who do not recognize the rights of law-abiding citizens from stealing (for that is the proper term) the game food of the country. The use of the game law is to protect the game of the land from entire anihilation, so that those who come after us can enjoy the pleasures of a hunt or the luxury of dining off game at home. The use of that law is to put a stop to ground-sluicing young quail in July and August as they approach in flocks to the little springs of Catalina Island—a process that in all probability the Herald man is conversant with.

The game of the country is a part of its food. It belongs to you and I and every other citizen. And being community property, our legislators should of right, and it is their duty to pass laws for its protection and preservation. Every civilized country in the world has its game laws and recognizes the necessity of preserving its game. It is a commodity that belongs to the people and which a few inconsiderate and selfish poachers should not be allowed to destroy at seasons of the year when the killing of one bird means the destruction of a score.

Gentlemen with the true intincts of sportsmen have banded themselves together in every country for the purpose of seeing that these laws are enforced and that the game of the land is protected from pot hunters during the season of procreation, and by so doing have accomplished great good. Such organizations are in existence all over this State, as well as in our own city, determined to see these laws respected. Five convictions have been had here already, for which our local officers should be commended; and more will surely follow if there are violations. If the Herald man thinks that "thousands will be killed" let him try to bag a few himself and see how he will relish a $50 quail-on-toast breakfast.

SPORTSMAN.

CAHUENGA DISTRICT.

Some Facts about a Fertile and Forward Region.

To the Editor of the Times—SIR: Our principal fruit stands have been for some time past, and are now, rendered particularly attractive, especially to strangers, by the display of huge "Jumbo" watermelons, many of which have been shipped East and to San Fracisco, but very few of us know from whence they come, or by whom they are raised. They are from the fruit farm of Mr. Nick Cochem, in the Cahuenga valley, about five miles from the center of Los Angeles, in a northwesterly direction, and two miles this side of Cahuenga Pass. His place adjoins the Feliz Rancho, formerly a portion of the estate of James Lick.

Mr. Cochem has this year about twenty-five acres in watermelons, and what may seem curious to many who have irrigation on the brain, he does not employ a drop of water in their growth other than what nature supplied during the last rainy season, and which by his ingenious system of cultivation has been preserved in the soil.

Last year he raised a hundred-pound watermelon, which will probably be exceeded this year. So far, however, a ninety-five-pounder is his best. It has been shipped to the Louisville Exposition. Notwithstanding their immense size, these watermelons are of the choicest flavor, and as crisp and delicate as can be. Mr. Cochem has on his place a number of grapevines of one, two and three years' growth, which can not be surpassed in this county.

These results are less due to any peculiarity of soil at this spot than to intelligent cultivation, by which he obtains an almost perfect conservation of the winter rain-fall in his soil. Do not allow the surface to bake, but keep it mellow, and almost any kind of soil will bring forth the year round, and the labor and expense will not be one quarter as great as where continued irrigation is resorted to. Plow well soon after the first rains, when the green feed and weeds are well started, and again to the end of the winter, with one later "cultivations" or harrowing, and your work is ended for that year. Allow no weeds to drain the soil of its moisture.

Now, every place is irrigated almost as much work has to be done, and the work always brings a fresh supply of weeds. Enough water falls every winter to supply the requisite moisture during the dry season, provided it is conserved in the soil.

It is well known that when a tree is irrigated often its main roots will all lie close to the surface, and hence more and more irrigation becomes a necessity, as without it the tree would soon languish and even perish; but when grown with it irrigation the roots will many of them go (naturally) to a sufficient depth to at all times supply the tree with its requisite amount of water. And how vastly superior in flavor and richness is fruit grown without artificial irrigation!

The citrus-fruit being of the opposite season, so to speak, are probably benefited by irrigation. I believe Dr. Congar does that.

It may not be untimely in this connection to say a word for our Cahuenga district, which, notwithstanding its nearness to Los Angeles, is as little known and appreciated as any other locality in the county. We are indeed a little celebrated for our good crops of hay and grain, but that is about all. The earliest vegetables are raised along our foot-hills, and shipped to San Francisco in the dead of winter. These include potatoes, peas, string beans, tomatoes and peppers.

Frost is almost unknown here. Last winter not even the most tender tips of our lime trees were touched, while in most localities they were killed to the ground. Our wells supply an abundance of pure water for all ordinary purposes, and the regular "Santa Monica," as our breeze filled, supplies the power to raise the water, being but a dozen or so miles from the ocean we have the breeze early in the day, and it is fresher and more invigorating than when it reaches the inter valleys. Last winter a number of vineyards and orchards were set out, and we made a most remarkable growth, and in the coming winter a large area will be planted in vines and trees. The land seems to do well here the few years in bearing producing well and coming earlier than in most places, giving ample time for drying the raisins before there is a chance for a rain. We are well protected from the severe of the "northerns" by the fine range of hills, or mountains rather, by which we are inclosed on the north, which is beginning to read too much like a advertisement, and I will restrain myself, but you charge "regular raise" on it, and I do not know of any one here who wants to sell out, you may attribute my flow of forceful remarks to honest pride in our valley, and its natural and almost supernatural productions.

CAHUENGA.

Mr. Landry has been on the other side long enough to report how the old man is, and is no more concerned than he will go over with some of his boys.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Facts and Fancies from Adjoining Localities.

ANAHEIM.

Gazette, Sept. 1.]

Among the grape exhibits made at the State Viticultural Convention were the following by A. Langenberger of Anaheim: Burger, Malvoisie, Isabella, Le Noir, Alexandria, Semilon, Blanc, Reisling, Cabinet, Orleans, Zinfandel, Pinean, Malbee.

The hot weather of the past week has hastened the ripening of grapes, and we learn that several vineyardists will begin crushing next week. Mr. Dreyfus' presses begin on Chasselas' and Gray Reisling on Monday. This is the earliest vintage in several years.

Are stingrays migratory? Do they get up excursions and travel from one summer resort to another? It seems so. In the early part of the season they are numerous on the surf at Anaheim landing, but they have not made their presence felt recently. Now they are infesting Laguna and Willmore. At the latter place on Sunday, three men named Gay, Bland and Bahret were stung.

The shipment of grapes to the East continues, the ruling rate being $30 per ton on the vines. This new market for our grapes comes at a most opportune time, and is a boon to grape growers for which they are doubtless grateful. Muscat grapes have heretofore been sold to winemakers for $18 per ton, delivered. The sudden advance to $30 per ton, is calculated to make the owners of Muscat vines look at everything coleur de rose.

SANTA ANA.

Standard, Sept. 1.]

Mr. L. Goepper, living north of Santa Ana, is putting in a cement ditch along his farm. It is an excellent device for saving water, and will pay well for the labor of making it.

Six months ago Mr. Cushman, the Santa Ana deputy postmaster, put in the postoffice 170 new boxes. They have all been taken but nineteen.

Carpenters in and around town are all as busy as bees, and hard to find. This speaks well for the improvement of the valley.

Mr. Harwood, who killed the mountain lion some time ago, has had the skin stuffed and it is now on exhibition at his residence.

RIVERSIDE.

Press Sept. 1st.]

Quong Sam Hoy, of Colton, became unruly during the heated spell and was arrested for endeavoring to kill Wong Hong. He was brought to Riverside and released on furnishing $500 bail.

Mr. Oliver Ely, of Chicago, who purchased property at San Bernardino last fall, has a landscape gardener employed to lay off the grounds and fit them up in first-class style. He has already a large force grading and preparing the land for planting. He will erect two fine houses, for himself and his brother Edward, and when the improvements are completed this will be some of the finest property in the county.

Mr. W. F. McCrary has sold to Samuel Marlow of Iowa, we believe, his five acre residence property in Riverside for $3,500.

ORANGE.

Santa Ana Standard.]

Fresh grapes and peaches are going forward more rapidly than ever. We believe that four carloads have been sent the present week to Chicago and Boston.

There are no new developments at the pile dam Work is progressing slowly, but there is great satisfaction in knowing that the work is being well done.

Last Thursday while out hunting for deer in the mountains, Mr. Northcross lost his footing and fell about 40 feet; he had on rib broken, and was very badly bruised.

Arizona.

Tucson Citizen, Aug. 30.]

General Crook has ordered the survey of the White Mountain Indian reservation, and detailed First Lieutenant T. A. Bingham for that purpose.

Considerable ore is being shipped from various points on the railroad to Benson, and much more will be shipped soon as the opportunity to make the mines themselves pay for opening is being appreciated with very good results.

A new law or decree of much interest to miners in Sonora has lately been promulgated. It ordered that when mines are lying idle under prorogue from the Government, the mining Peritos of the District cease visiting same until active operations, as unless such operations are being carried on their visits are of no use, being designed only to see that operations were carried on properly and according to law.

Benson Herald, Aug. 30.]

Times are picking up in Benson.

The Contention mill started up on Monday.

Fine fields of corn greet the eye all up and down the river.

The rainy season is nearly over, and with it the warm weather.

We received from M. A. B. Chambers, assayer at the Contention mine, some handsome specimens of ore that assay $9,000 to the ton, from the water level, 600 feet below the surface, for which he will accept our thanks.

The district lying between Contention and St. David's was visited on Sunday by one of the heaviest rainstorms that has been known for years. The roads and low ground were completely covered with water from two to 24 inches in depth.

SHOCKING SUICIDE.

A Ventura County Farmer Fires Himself Out with Gunpowder.

SAN BUENAVENTURA, September 2d.—Our whole county was shocked at a tragedy which occurred twenty-four miles from this town yesterday. It appears that W. A. Gordon, who has done business at Santa Paula for ten years, had sent East for a brother to come out and join him. The brother was to arrive at Santa Paula yesterday, and three hours previously William started out fishing, as he said, leaving his watch and chain at home. The brother arrived, but William did not return. This morning the neighbors started out on his track, and at the distance of seven miles found where he had deliberately blown himself to pieces. He had evidently laid down on a giant powder cartridge and exploded it, his head and legs only being found in the excavated hole, while the rest of his remains were found scattered over the ground and in the tree-tops. Nothing but temporary insanity can account for the terrible tragedy. Mr. Gordon was as much respected as any man in Ventura county, and the grief at his death is universal.

MANY MEN
—OF—
MANY MINDS

The traditional shopkeeper prefers to keep his entire stock for years than to part from it without his customary profit. He would rather retain remnants and refused merchandise than to regulate the price to its real saleable value.

Such merchants are neither progressive nor judicious, and people trading at such an institution soon find out to their dismay that merchandise, like iron, wheat or produce, sometimes declines in value.

The PEOPLES' STORE, by reason of its large trade, finds that periodically it is necessary to weed out the large creation of

ODDS AND ENDS

That naturally accumulates. These goods are at present writing being marked and placed on our Center Tables.

We have just reviewed the Odds and Ends and find remarkable good values amongst them, such as would interest mothers and heads of families.

Early callers will receive first choice, while tardy purchasers cannot expect to view a full assortment.

We publish a Story Paper which we send to any address Free.

It is a WORK-COOKED FOOD, ready for immediate table use, and yet will keep in a dry place for years unaltered in quality. Unequaled as a diet for cases of nervous exhaustion and debility, constipation and dyspepsia. Has been tested for years by Dr. J. C. Jackson, in Our Home Hygienic Institute, upon all classes of invalids, with remarkable success. WE BRING GLAD TIDINGS!

HEALTH! HEALTH! HEALTH! HEALTH! HEALTH! HEALTH!

HEALTH restor ation prolonged to suffering humanity, by the most wonderful curative agents ever discovered. I invite the sick, no matter what their diseases may be, to call and investigate for themselves before abandoning all hope, for it will cost you nothing. I give no encouragement unless there is a fair prospect of making a cure. I will endeavor to be candid in my opinion, and reasonable in my charges. I claim not to cure everybody, but to cure all that can be cured. I am formerly from New York city, and a graduate of one of the best medical colleges in the United States, and a most thorough electrician, and have had many years successful practice in the treatment of both acute and chronic diseases. To remove all doubt and convince my patients that I claim nothing but what I am, I refer to my diploma and the numerous recommendations in my possession, which will always be ready for inspection at my office. I HAVE NO ONE CURE-ALL! nor do I make a hobby of any one mode of treatment, I use electricity or medicines or both, as cases may require. I find he cause of disease, remove it, and nature, assisted by medicinal remedies properly applied, will promote a cure without fail. TO THE LADIES. To the ladies I would say: You, whose sufferings have become intolerable, and who have suffered a thousand deaths from those diseases so common to your sex, give me a call, for I CAN CURE YOU WITHOUT FAIL, and make your lives once again worth living for. And all consultations will be strictly private and confidential. YOUNG MEN. To those young men who are suffering from year to year, and whose vital powers have become impaired, and nervous system unstrung and broken down, and are suffering all the horrors from the effects of youthful follies; COME AND SEE ME. I have a sure preventative of premature decay and early death. To those who from indiscretions have contracted private diseases and are desirous of being cured, come without fail, for I can guarantee you a speedy cure. I treat with success all diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Liver, Head, Nerves, Kidneys, Bladder, Womb, Blood, Affections of the Urinary Organs, Gravel, Piles, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, Diseases of the Eye and Ear, etc., etc. Consultation free at my office.

DR. E. ROBBINS, the celebrated Australian Electro-Magnetic Healer, after several years experience in the Australian colonies, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver, and several months in this city, has decided to permanently locate here, where he has performed so many wonderful cures without the aid of medicine. His rooms are crowded daily with patients anxious to get the benefit of his power over so-called incurable diseases. Dr. Robbins is patronized by some of our leading citizens. He also cures those diseases without explanation from the patients, free of charge, and has fitted up his Institute at considerable expense with Dr Hoffmann & Palmer's celebrated Electro-Therapeutic Bath, which is pronounced by mineral physicians to be the greatest discovery in medical science of modern times; also other medicated baths, with the latest improvements in electrical instruments for administering Faradic, Galvanic and static electricity. aug31-3m

A New Invention.

A reporter yesterday inspected a new, and what is certain to prove a valuable invention by Dr. U. Smith, a dentist of this city. It is wholly his own idea, and consists of an instrument by which, on application, the gums of the mouth at the place applied become numb and insensible to pain, so that teeth can be extracted safely and harmlessly and without resorting to the dangerous anaesthetics usually employed by the profession. This instrument Dr. Smith has been working on for some time past. It is now perfected and is likely to take a high place in dental science. Its main recommendation is that it can be used with perfect safety.

The High License.

From the Ventura Free Press, Sept. 1.]

The demurrer to the complaint in the case of The People vs. Glasgow—the defendant being sued for the amount of money due for his liquor license—was argued before Justice Hamer on Wednesday, and the demurrer overruled. Defendant was given until Saturday to answer. As we understand it, so soon as the answer attacks the validity of the ordinance or the constitutionality of any Act of the Legislature, it is the duty of the Justice to suspend all further proceedings and transfer the case to the Superior Court—a Justice having no jurisdiction over such questions. The Superior Court can order a jury drawn on Monday, and the case can easily be tried on Wednesday, if pressed. The ordinance was passed two months ago, and practically nothing has yet been done towards enforcing it, while more than thirty saloons in the County are in full blast every day The tax-payers are growing impatient.

Street Grading on the Hill.

The condition of Bunker Hill Avenue since it was graded (?) is simply disgraceful, especially between Court and Fourth streets. The street is fearfully cut and torn up, and instead of the hard and level surface, which made it one of the best drives on the hill before the grade, the dust is ankle deep, which in turn will be mud as soon as the first rain falls. The municipal attempt to "improve" has resulted in much damage to the neighborhood, which will continue to be felt for some time to come. One cause of this disgraceful failure to make a respectable thoroughfare is the fact that the work was undertaken in midsummer, when the ground was hard. Had it been done just after the winter rains, the result might have been more satisfactory. Grading on the hills is of course a necessity, but the work should be done at the proper time, else it is worse than useless. Just after the rainy season the heavy clay lands are in the best condition for the grader.

Police Paragraphs.

James Boyd and Peter Looney had a fight in a saloon yesterday. In the evening Boyd was escorted to the City Jail.

Three Spanish boys were arrested yesterday for stealing grain sacks from Rand's warehouse.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

Advantage of the Enterprise to City and County.

The construction of the proposed Los Angeles and San Gabriel Valley Railroad will benefit this city, both directly and indirectly. It is estimated that the road and rolling stock will cost at least $300,000. That amount of idle capital put into circulation, the greater part of it in this county, will of itself be highly important. The operation and maintenance of the road will necessitate the employment of a large number of men, which is another important item. All property along the line of the road will be increased in value from 10 to 50 per cent. The advantages of rapid communication will give the foot-hill fruit lands prominence in the real estate markets, and twenty homes will be established where at present there is one. It is well known that fruit grown in foot-hill orchards and vineyards is, in most cases, superior to that grown in valleys. A railroad to the foot-hills, provided that charges for transportation shall be reasonable, will make that portion of the country the most desirable of all to the horticulturist and the grape-grower.

A gentleman who is well acquainted with the country yesterday said that in his opinion the road would be extended along the foot-hills and across the country to Wilmington or San Pedro. It was not ascertained whether it is the intention of the company to make the extension suggested, but it would certainly be practicable, and in the end would prove remunerative. Recently it was proposed to encircle San Francisco, the metropolis of the State, by a railroad, which should carry thousands of sight-seers around the city in an hour or two. For some reason the railroad was not built. There can be no valid objection to a railroad which shall encircle the metropolis of Southern California, and carry, not sight seers alone, but hundreds of tons of produce from farm, orchard and vineyard. The new railroad will have an opportunity to become the great artery of commerce within the county, if such extensions are made from time to time as business will demand.

There is no reason to believe that charges will be extortionate, or that another monopoly will be fastened like a leech upon the people. The incorporators have interests in the county which they could not well jeopardize in order to reap a golden harvest from discrimination and oppression, and it would be unjust to suppose that they have any desire to do so.

Another advantage which would be derived from the construction of the road is, that the beautiful settlements of Pasadena and San Gabriel would be brought within a few minutes' ride of Los Angeles. Business men, if they desired to do so, could leave their country homes, and still have time to attend to their duties here. All along the line of the road might be seen the residences of city merchants who prefer the rural surroundings and pure air of a country home. Every city of importance has one or two suburbs of which it feels especially proud, one or two spots where it would seem that the work of nature or of art could go no further. At some point on the Los Angeles and San Gabriel Railroad will be located, beyond a doubt, the sylvan paradise in which all good Angelinos will wish to reside before they are compelled to explore another world for another paradise. In brief, great things may be expected from the new railroad enterprise, and it should receive hearty public and private recognition, encouragement and sympathy.

Runaways Last Evening.

Two runaways occurred last evening. At about 6 P. M. a two-horse team standing on First street took fright at the hand car and ran down the street, colliding with and demolishing a Chinese laundry wagon and making quite a detour around the streets of the neighborhood before they were captured, but fortunately doing no further damage. The Chinaman's horse ran in an opposite direction, dragging the wrecked wagon after him, but was easily captured a short distance from the scene of the catastrophe. A horse attached to a light buggy came tearing down Main street a little before dusk, but was secured before any serious damage was done.

Capt. Cox's Body Recovered.

The body of Capt. Jesse Cox, drowned by the capsizing of a boat off Santa Monica on the 27th ult., was discovered lying on the beach, about three miles from the Salt Works, by Mr. Waite last Monday evening. It was brought to the city yesterday morning and the funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. Jevne, the deceased's son-in-law, at 2 P. M. on Thursday.

One boot was missing from the dead man's body, which shows that he must have made a desperate struggle with the pitiless waves before he finally succumbed. The body was somewhat injured by contact with the rocks on the beach where it was found.

The Matter with Santa Monica Canyon.

There are but ten or twelve tents now occupied at Santa Monica canyon. The glory of that beautiful place as a popular resort has waned, and until a different order of things is restored, it will not regain its lost prestige. Five saloons were required this year to minister to the wants of the campers, which fact tells its own story. Most of the visitors to seaside resorts went elsewhere this year and will continue to let alone the place which tolerates such a state of affairs. If the manager of the canyon is wise he will bar out the deadfalls in the future.

Concert at Santa Monica.

The visitors to Santa Monica last Saturday evening, as well as the residents there who attended the concert given by Messrs. Froane and Kearne, were particularly fortunate. The young gentlemen named have been stopping at Santa Monica during the season and gave the concert for the benefit of the M. E. Church of that place. The concert was really an artistic success, and the performers demonstrated that they are true artists. The Kearne brothers will be remembered by amusement lovers as having participated in one of the concerts gotten up by Madame Marra a year or so ago, when they took the audience by storm. They are residents of Riverside.

Calico Mining News.

Calico Print Sept. 1.]

The Garfield Mine is turning out handsomely. For the length of time it has been in operation it has turned out almost as much bullion as the Silver King mine. It is owned by Messrs. J. S. Doe and Wm. Raymond of San Francisco. Some of the ore bodies that have been opened up in the mine were immensely rich, and the ore that has been milled has averaged nearly $200 a ton in bullion. About three weeks ago one hundred tons of ore were shipped to the Alhambra mill at Hawley's station. The first grade milled $900 to the ton, the second $90. The average was about $200.

A strike of rich silver-bearing ore was made in the King mine in the lower tunnel crosscutting the vein at a depth of 450 feet, thus conclusively establishing the fact as to its permanency. More may be said of it in the near future, as the work of crosscutting progresses.

The Blackfoot, which pinched last week, has widened again and is looking well. They are sacking very rich ore, which will go about 800 dollars per ton.

The Taggart mine has about 15 tons of wonderfully rich ore sacked, which assays $1,000 per ton.

Progress on the Silver Queen mine near the Waterman is being made as rapidly as possible. If the character of ore they are now working in should continue to any depth the mine would be a veritable bonanza.

The Mammoth mine is shipping a large amount of rich ore to their mill on the river. The mine is looking well, and producing about 35 tons per day, working about 30 men.

THE SULPHUR WELL CASE.

The Preliminary Examination Continued till September 15.

The case of the people vs. Dr. J. F. Fulton, William F. Faught, et als., charged with blowing up Mrs. Baker's sulphur well, was called in Justice Morgan's court Monday morning. The District Attorney filed an application for a continuance, which set forth that L. C. Mason, a material witness for the prosecution, who resides near Los Nietos, was sick in bed and too infirm to attend court, although he had been subpœnaed; that affiant expects to prove by said witness that he overheard the defendant, Fulton, talking over with one other person the project of blowing up the well referred to in the complaint; that Fulton first proposed to destroy the well by pulling out sixty feet of the pipe in order to let the well cave in; and that finally said Fulton decided that the idea of pulling up the pipe was not so good as to blow the well up with giant powder.

Mr. Wells, for the defense, said that the defendants were ready for trial, and they had the right under the Constitution to demand a speedy examination. They did not seek to avoid anything, for they thought there would be evidence sufficient to prove their innocence, but they wanted a speedy examination and would object to a continuance of the case.

District Attorney White replied that the only desire of the prosecution was to have the matter thoroughly investigated. It might be, and he hoped that such would be the case, that the testimony for the defense would be sufficient to prove the innocence of the defendants. He would always prefer to see a man proved innocent of crime, but it was his duty to see that all the evidence material to this investigation was produced. He did not know what the evidence would be, but if what he had been told was true, in his opinion there would be reasonable grounds for expecting a conviction.

Deputy Sheriff Gard and Jos. Baker were sworn and testified to the fact of the witness Mason's sickness and inability to attend.

By agreement between counsel the Court continued the case till Sept. 15th at 10 a. m.
